GAME PROTECTIVE
BODIES TO JOIN WITH STOCKMEN

Believed Joint Action Can Be Taken Against Predatory Animals Which Will Be of Benefit to Both Classes.

A varmint kills livestock. A varmint kills game. Why then should not stockmen and game protections join forces in combating varmints? This is the question which the newly organized game protective associations of New Mexico are asking themselves, and wondering why nobody ever thought of it before.

The annual loss of livestock from predatory animals has been estimated to be $15,000,000. Many stockmen figure that the average lobo wolf destroys $1,000 worth of sheep a year.
It is well known that a fat coyote is the mountain lion's absolute ideal of epicurean delight, and no coyote survives where lions are found. As for the coyote, whenever he can't get lambch. he takes mutton. But all of these extravagant fellows eat game between times. Venison, the lamb of mountain sheep, turkey, antelope, fawns around eggs, young wild ducklings, quail—every kind of wild game in New Mexico is found on the hill of fate of one or all of them. Forest officers tell of one instance of finding seven deer killed by lions on one small corner of the Gila national forest.
So it is all over the state.

The game protective associations of New Mexico are going to help enforce the game laws. That, of course, is a first essential to a better game supply.
But they are also going further than that, and seek to reduce the natural enemies of the game. This they can do by organized co-operation with stockmen. Just what form of action will be taken will have to be threshed out in conference with the livestock associations. It appears certain, however, that the game protective associations will be a new and weighty factor in the predatory animal campaign.

Game protective associations are now at work in Taos, Magdalena, Albuquerque and Silver City. They are co-operating closely with the state game warden and the United States forest service. Some are confronted with peculiar local problems. At Magdalena, for instance, the annual hunting of hunters has become so large that a great deal of livestock is stripped each year by stray bullets from high power rifles. To prevent this the Magdalena Game Protective association is figuring on reaching each party of hunters with a special letter asking them to avoid indiscriminate shooting, and at the same time warning them against violations of the game law and carelessness with forest fires.

Carey, running chief Game gamewarder, represented the state game warden, Trinfield C. de Haro, at the meeting. He gave a short talk on game protection and told the members that the game law improvements secured from the last legislature were good, but that more of them could have been obtained if there had been more game protective associations to work in the work.

POSTAL EXTENDS THE
NIGHT LETTER RATE
TO ALASKAN OFFICES

Announcement was made this morning by the local office of the Postal Telegraph company that the night letter rate had been extended to Alaskan offices of that concern.
The announcement statement follows:

"The Postal Telegraph company is offering a rate from San Antonio to Anchorage, Alaska, which will be given to them at 10c per word and 10c per minute. Their slogan is 'The Postman Never Sleeps.'

The company is pleased to introduce the night letter rate to Alaska.

This innovation, which is a developed cut over competition, brings Alaska closer to the United States in minutes instead of weeks.
